

JOB PROFILE

Business Advisor to the CEO

REQUIREMENTS

- 3+ years in Strategy Consulting
- Due Diligence and M&A experience
- Background in Technology
- International

The Business Advisor acts as the right hand of the CEO and Business President of Wavin. They oversee large, international projects and support the M&A agenda. It's a perfect position for a former consultant to get to know the organization well with plenty of exposure to senior management. If successful, a challenging next step, for example a managerial position, is certainly a possibility.

About Wavin

For many years, Wavin has been leading in technically advanced, innovative solutions for construction and infrastructure. The company operates mainly in Europe, Latin America, and Asia in more than 37 countries, all from its head office in Amsterdam. In recent years, Wavin has also started expanding in Canada and the United States.

Wavin understands better than anyone that a global footprint also brings with it the responsibility to meet the major challenges of our time. The company uses its technology to keep our cities livable, providing services like drinking water and sanitation, and protecting people from cold, heat, and floods. Wavin builds safe, sustainable, climate-proof environments that will last for years to come.

Wavin is part of Mexico's Orbia, a community of companies with over 22,000 employees and active around the world. Orbia and Wavin share a common vision: to advance life around the world. Together and full of energy, they are pursuing their social objectives. For them, a better world takes precedence over quarterly figures and share prices.

Business Advisor to the CEO

The Business Advisor will serve as the right-hand person for Wavin's CEO and Business President, Maarten Roef. It's a versatile role that includes oversight for large projects, collaboration on M&A projects, and support for Maarten's decision-making process. The Business Advisor has regular exposure to senior management, giving them plenty of opportunities to showcase and develop towards a next step within the organization.

As the right-hand to the CEO, the Business Advisor brings clarity to difficult problems. They provide structure with to-the-point presentations and ensure that Maarten can quickly make the right decisions. The Business Advisor makes extensive use of data – which they collect themselves – and performs a wide range of analyses.

The Business Advisor also oversees large global and regional projects. This gives them both a project management role and a more strategic and substantive role. These projects often involve senior stakeholders from different parts of the business, such as manufacturing, supply chain, sales, and marketing. Strategic positioning and expansion into new countries and regions are two good examples. The Business Advisor will travel around the world for these projects to explore topics in more depth with local teams.

The Business Advisor's third responsibility is supporting Wavin's M&A agenda. They screen acquisition candidates, analyze new markets, and develop potential deals. Strategic skills and a solid understanding of finance will be indispensable tools. The Business Advisor will also work closely with the VP for New Business Development & M&A on large acquisitions. ■
