About Roland Berger

Roland Berger is a global strategy consulting firm founded in Munich in 1967. With more than 3,500 consultants across fifty offices worldwide, it is one of the few truly international consulting firms with European roots. The Amsterdam office employs around 130 consultants and support staff. Empathy, entrepreneurship, and excellence are the values that shape the company culture: people who think big, make connections, and take initiative. The Amsterdam office has built a reputation for being open and ambitious, without losing the collaborative character that makes it distinctive.

Within Roland Berger, practices are organized around industry platforms. The Consumer Goods, Retail & Agriculture platform focuses on strategic and operational questions in consumer-facing industries. Challenges range from shifting consumer demand and technological change to sustainability and margin pressure. The platform brings together expertise in strategy, innovation, operations, and implementation to address them.

Vacancy

Chief of Staff

Alexander Belderok leads the Consumer platform, a global business with end-to-end responsibility for growth, client work, commercial pipeline, partner performance, finance, and HR. The Chief of Staff owns the operational backbone that holds it together: preparing business reviews for global leadership, tracking the commercial pipeline, managing budgets, and making sure MT-level discussions are well-prepared. She/he drives strategic initiatives and keeps the platform team aligned with corporate functions and other platforms across the Roland Berger network.

Numbers, analysis, conclusions, and presentations need to be accurate and razor-sharp before Alexander presents them to the global leadership of Roland Berger. This means the Chief of Staff is someone he can rely on completely. As his strategic right hand, this role anticipates what's needed, flags when something is off track, and makes sure that decisions made in meetings translate into action. The position is based in Amsterdam and focused on the platform itself: its people, its operations, and its performance, with occasional travel.

The role offers a high level of responsibility, entrepreneurial freedom, and real ownership. That makes it a natural fit for a Chief of Staff who turns complex analysis into a clear story for senior stakeholders, manages projects with structure, and thrives in a fast-moving international environment. For someone looking to operate close to the top of a global consulting firm while maintaining a sustainable pace, this role delivers exactly that.
