About Rockfield

Rockfield is on a mission to create sustainable homes that foster vibrant communities across Europe. As a fully vertically integrated real estate platform, the company combines investment management, development, and property management to deliver housing designed for multiple residential segments, with a strong specialization in student housing and living concepts for young professionals. Managing assets worth more than two billion euros, Rockfield manages approximately eight thousand residential units and has developed over ten thousand homes across Europe – including the Netherlands, Spain, France, Italy, and Germany.

Rockfield partners with some of the world's largest institutional investors, including pension funds from the Netherlands, the United Kingdom, Japan, and Switzerland, who provide long-term capital. Despite these partnerships, the organization remains independent, maintaining full ownership and strategic autonomy.

A recent example of that trust is the announcement of a 350 million euro joint investment with ABP, the largest pension fund in the Netherlands, targeting student and starter housing. This underscores both the scale at which Rockfield operates and the platform's appeal to institutional investors seeking high-quality, sustainable residential real estate with a long-term horizon.

At the core of the company is a culture of energy, collaboration, and professionalism. Teams are small and agile, with approximately forty-five entrepreneurial professionals, and operate from Rockfield's main offices in Amsterdam and Madrid, as well as a satellite office in Barcelona. Thirty-five of the team are based in Amsterdam, with the remainder working from Spain. Over the past year and a half, Rockfield has welcomed around fifteen new colleagues, reflecting a period of rapid team growth. The dynamic environment continues to attract smart, motivated talent who want to contribute to a fast-growing company that puts people and the planet at the center of every decision.

Vacature

Head of People

Until now, HR has primarily been overseen by the management team with support from external providers, while certain operational tasks, such as payroll administration, have been handled internally. As the company grows and professionalizes its structure, with clearer roles, responsibilities, and governance, there is a need for a Director-level Head of People to bring structure, professionalize HR, and act as a strategic partner to the leadership team.

The new Head of People will be at the heart of shaping a people strategy that reflects the company's energy and ambitious growth plans. On joining, the Head of People will find an organization that requires further HR development, offering a broad and varied set of responsibilities that will continue to evolve over time. This broad portfolio includes advising on organizational design, compensation schemes, governance, and workforce structure, ensuring teams have clear hierarchies and well-defined growth paths. On the operational side, the Head of People will oversee contract management, local compliance, employment conditions, and support the onboarding of new teams, including the company's international expansion.

At Rockfield, attracting and retaining top talent is paramount. The Head of People will build frameworks to support learning and development, helping employees grow while aligning their potential with the company's long-term goals. Strong internal communication and compelling employer branding will embed a culture of collaboration and professionalism, enhancing engagement, retention, and the overall employee experience.

“ In this role, you will enjoy a unique mix of strategic influence and hands-on impact. Everyone rolls up their sleeves, and with the right skills and mindset, you can truly make a difference in a fast-growing environment full of energy and opportunities to grow.”

▪ Wouter van den Eijnden, CEO

This is an exciting opportunity for a leader who brings structure without dampening the company’s entrepreneurial and informal culture, combining energy, hands-on drive, and strong communication skills. What makes it particularly compelling is the opportunity to build: the foundation is in place, and the Head of People will have full mandate and resources to develop a fully-fledged HR function, and eventually build their own team.
